Car Insurance Up 8.9%; Two Victorians But Island Harder Hit

Good Risk To Pay Less

gested Vancouver Island will pay more for five-point insurance starting April 1 even though many will be eligible for a partial noclaims bonus to be introduced all over the province by board companies. Cause is a 28 per-cent increase in the cost of collision insurance.

Hardest hit will be "registered owners or principal operators" who are under 25 years of age. Although they operate only eight per cent of the cars, they are involved in a large number of the accidents. Acci-dent figures released last week by the provincial governm to 30 age group. Over-all increase for this group will be 35

Per cent.
Net effect of the new complex rate structure issued today by B.C. Fire Underwriters' Association will be an 8.9 per cent Island motorists will pay more than the average, chiefly because the increased traffic on the Island has raised the number of collision-damage claims

SAUSAGES AND BRICKBATS

MY RECENT COLUMN is which I depicted the joy with which Britons were hailing the liberation of the sausage, an event which aroused even the august London Times to greet it with a welcoming editorial to "The Liberated Sausage"—has invoked the ire of some of my readers, several of whom have hurled brickbats at my head.

One of the most virulent, which is signed merely " A Patriot To Both Countries," gives me a good, going-over, not only for my column on sausages but for what she and the writer is obviously a "she"—describes as "the drivel" I write and in which, she claims, I "do little else but ridicule BRITTAIN (sic) and draw comparisons to her dis-

After stating that my column on sausage made her "positively sick, that a woman one-time Speaker of the House had nothing more interlectual (sic) to write about," my anonymous correspondent goes on to say that she is send-ing several copies of my column home "to show the folks there the reason why so much anti-British feeling is bred

Incidentally, it comes as a revelation to me that there is much anti-British feeling here. I, after 37 years in Victoria, have long been under the impression that Vancouver Island is as pro-British a place as one could find anywhere in Canada. And, if I am anti-British in writing on the liberated sausage, so is The Times of London.

COMPARISONS ODIOUS

After the hypothetical question "Is this country so perfect, including the much-discussed sausages that I find after cooking are a quarter their normal size, plus a pan full of fat and highly expensive?" my correspondent asks why I "do not point out to your public that meat over in Britain is three times cheaper than here, and that although rations of meat are small, liver heart, and such things are not included, and she adds: "or would that spoil your

Further, my anonymous hurler of brickbats finds fault with my columns dealing with analogies between political issues of today and those of British history, as revealed in Hansard of long ago.

WOULD BLITZ. ME

In that connection she writes: "Most of your comparisons of this country with BRITTAIN (sic) are very stupid, such as (my colmn of) March 7th going back to 1722-1809; Feb. 26th, going back to 1831. No wonder this is called the island of retired people, the pity being you have not done so, and the time is long over due. Your position in the province is so wasted and so much good could tion in the province is so wasted and so much good could have been accomplished for the real good of the people, instead of promoting bad feeling."

My correspondent concludes: "What a pity you did not experience the blitz to have made you more tolerant... my experience here is that the real Canadians are fine people; it is the one-time Britisher that is useless to BRITTAIN and a menace to the country where they have made a

FALSE IMPRESSION?

Another brickbat, but not quite such a "blitz," comes my way from Mr. E. H. Livesay of Earlston Avenue, who considers my column on the sausage "gives the usual false impression of the food supply in Britain so common in the Canadian press.

Space does not permit my going into the detail of his letter, but he compares British sausages, steak, bread, fish, and celery with our Canadian products—and is of the opinion that the former are better in flavor and nutrition, and cheaper. Of course, they are cheaper—but then wages over there are not as high as here, either.

SMUG SATISFACTION

Mr. Livesay goes on: "I would remind Mrs. Hodges and others who are too smug in their satisfaction with conditions in this country and condescending in their references to things in war-worn Britain . . . that Britain was bled white in the war and is still licking her wounds, whereas Canada made a magnificent thing out of it, suffered not at all, and is still enjoying the highest standard of living in

I leave my readers to judge as to whether I am guilty of discrediting my native land. But at least some ex-Britishers don't think so. One, a Lancashire woman, writing from Sidney, says: "I always enjoy reading your column They are interesting and really very amusing at times. I get a good laugh from them which is better than doctor's

The Place to Speak

REMARKS BY PREMIER BENnett in Vancouver have been taken as a forecast of an early election. This is not surprising. By word and action he has shown a sustained eagerness for such an

But the text of his statement fails to satisfy a number of British Columbians who have looked to him and to his colleagues to explain Social Credit principles and legislation to the people. Said Premier Bennett:

"In seven weeks in the Legislature I haven't made a single speech and I'm not going to make one tonight. But it won't be many weeks before many speeches are being made throughout the length and breadth of B.C."

Is that to be taken as a statement of the Social Credit government's intention to evade discussion of public business in the Legislature, which is surely the place for it, and to specialize rather in campaign oratory on the hustings?

Mr. Bennett says quite frankly that he has not made a speech in seven weeks in the Legislature. Perhaps if he had, the people of this province and the representatives they chose in the last election would be better informed. Silence has its limitations.

For instance Labor Minister Wicks had to be brought sharply to consciousness of the fact that he could not assume an attitude of silent disdain when issues of his department were before the House. On other occasions Mrs. Ralston has shown scant courtesy to members seeking information from the government.

Mr. Bennett need only reflect on the speeches made "throughout the length and breadth of B.C." last year to realize such outpourings are no substitute for intelligent discussion in the Legislature. His attention is being drawn continually to Social Credit election promises that do not jibe with actuality. The "non-compulsory" hospital insurance issue case in point.

Is he now suggesting a repetition of that procedure? Are important members of the government pro-posing to leave to the heat and fury of a campaign their outline of objectives and explanation of their op-

Perhaps, on reflection, the pre-mier will remedy the omission of single speech in the first seven weeks of the Legislature's life. The place for responsible utterance, we submit, is the parliamentary forum, not a campaign stump.

On the Threshold of a New Age

THE RECENT ANNOUNCE-ment that an atomic power generator had been produced at Oak Ridge experimental laboratories in the United States has been followed by indications that Canada is ready to embark on a similar project.

Always in the forefront of peacetime atomic research—our production of radioactive material for medical use is second to none-Canada already has taken the first steps in power production.

The new American reactor provides enough power to run a 150kilowatt electrical plant. That is a modest output, and in the light of the $4,000,000 cost of the project is hardly at this date a commercial operation. A similarly tentative start has been made in Britain.

Canada's Chalk River technical facilities are at present fully engaged in rebuilding the NRX atomic reactor that became worn to a dangerous state some months ago, and constructing a new and more powerful NRU reactor that will, like the older model, produce cobalt bombs and other useful substances.

Now private industry is being recruited to take part in the power development. Several major power companies have accepted the invita-tion offered some time ago by the federal government. They will send representatives to Chalk River to with government scientists.

First work will probably involve thorough study of costs, since the major technical problems are ready fairly well in hand. As the study progresses further private business organizations are expected to become involved-electrical firms, manufacturing plants and othersas was the experience in the United The final result will be the product of individual and public effort-a necessary combination in a project of such vast possibilities.

There is little likelihood that Canadian power production will be revolutionized in the near future. The great hydro-electric establishments and other power sources will continue to function for many years to come, in the view of most experts. But the atomic future must be a matter of concern for the present; the preliminary work must be done; Canada, already so rich in natural resources, including uranium deposits, must keep in the van of pro-

Writhing on the Wall

PHILOSOPHERS MAY FIND A topic for discussion in the news report that tells of London mothers putting their babies in cages and hanging them from the windowsill.

The new fashion apparently is the result of cramped space in the great metropolis, and baby's need for fresh air and sunlight. The arrangement is said to be catching on with mothers in apartment buildings, particularly after they have seen the installation man get into the cageabout three feet square—and jump about to test it.

But others may probe deeper and see a greater significance in this development. Since the young must be conditioned to endure, and survive in, the modern world, would not a few months spent in a tiny cage be an excellent introduction?

From the wire cage on the wall

the tot will graduate to the cage of the classroom, to the cage of the secondary school, to the cage of a job. And while the individual's body is constrained in these social and eco-nomic cages, his intellect will undergo incarceration in others.

At an early age the mind will enter a political cage and probably remain there for life. It will likewise be fitted into a religious receptacle, according to the race and antece dents of its owner. And its other fixed beliefs and opinions will form cages no less enduring than that in which the infant is suspended from the windowsill.

Knowing no other state, the oc-cupant will not find the confinement unduly uncomfortable. It is only if the tin-snips, real or allegorical, are left carelessly within reach that

The parallel, said the professor; was obvious and striking—a brittle, one-man regime in Russia, as in Rome, must somehow manage a transfer of power among ambitious men, all hungry for Caesar's spoils. The civil wars between Anthony and Brutus and then between Anthony and Augustus might lie ahead in Russia. The professor could not guess and it didn't matter much. A far deeper process was under way, not only in Russia but everywhere.

THUS spoke the voice of England's ancient culture out of its besieged fortress in Oxford. It is a low and quiet voice of disenchantment, almost of defeat and despair. Right or wrong, I think it a voice worth hearing.

What, asked my friend, is the real movement of events in this century underneath all the confusion and clamor of the surface? Surely, said he, it is the emergence of the mob in the free world slave world of the late Joseph Stalin. Leaving aside the slaves, who must find their own salvation in their own way, what about the mob of the free world?

It is called many things—democracy, the Common Man, freedom or the welfare state. If it lives up to such names, said the professor, the mob will master and justify its revolution. The world will save its soul alive. By the word "mob," the professor hastened to add, he meant nothing derogatory or contemp tuous. He just meant the people and he loved the people, especially the people of England, his own people. But did the people really know what they were about these days? That was the question which must settle everything.

FTER we had adjourned to a nearby A tea shop, still reeling with the glory of Shakespeare's last act, the professor went on to say that the question he had raised came to sharpest focus in England today. For on what, he asked, had the civilization of England been built? It had been built on quality, nothing else.

The quality of England's believably, as you moving throughout the world, irrigating would expect. There, and nourishing the whole world economy, between the acts, I was only the outward reflection of something much more important, the quality

He might be thought a prig, an aristocrat or even a Tory for saying that, and such risks must be taken, but the fact remained that the quality of English thought, not some political or economic policy, not some government or statesman, not wealth of military power, would determine the long future of England.

THAT was what worried the professor. eyeing the world from the cloisters of Oxford and through the clear eyes of William Shakespeare, greatest of all William Shakespeare, greatest of all Englishmen. What, in short, was happening to English thought? Nothing good, so far as he could see.

The quality of English thought, as he saw it, was being debased by a mob too young in its own mind to understand these things. As the Roman mob destroyed the Republic by demanding more than all the riches of Rome could provide, so the modern mob in all free countries could destroy democracy by precisely the same impossible expectations, by methods that could not work, by an easy short-cut leading only to bankrupty or dictatorship.

THE professor admitted that this was putting the issue in extreme and exaggerated terms. Nevertheless, such was the nature of the world revolution and therein lay its cardinal test—the test of quality surviving an age of mass production and mean days. duction and mass ideas. And here Amer ica must play a vital, probably a decisive

Its production and its culture now flowed into every corner of the world, even into Russia which denounced but imitated its indus trial methods. But in all this prolifera tion of goods were real ideas growing or Was quality being maintained or debased by that vulgarity which is the real enemy of civilization?

N short, asked the professor, could quality of mind. Britain's ancient and essential asset, survive the tide of the Common Man's revolution everywhere; could the Common Man learn that qual is as important as quantity, quantity without quality will make Comman Men into a mob?

The professor confessed that he not know but hoped for the best. In Oxford, at the moment, he felt like a man living on a tiny island in a dark, rising The latest Caesar had died. Antonys everywhere was in full cry, and were crying havoc, as usual. Still wonwhether the mob would listen to the professor caught a late train

Touchy About the Borders

THE most likely explanation for the rash of shooting incidents on the Soviet air borders lies in a significant moment of the recent past.

It was the time after the Inchon vic Army Douglas Mac-Arthur had given President Truman what amounted to a promise that the Chinese Communists would not intervene in Korea. Every outward appearance supported Gen. MacArthur's convic-

Joseph In July and August, a couple of Chinese divisions would been enough to tip the balance against our own hard pressed forces. If they had intervened then, the U.N. armies might have been thrown out of rk the Red Cross does in so Korea. In early September, a couple of Chinese divisions could have stopped the U.N. invasion of North Korea. The mere announcement of a "preventive occupa-tion" would have brought a U.N. verdict

Gen. MacArthur reasoned that if the Chinese had already thrown away such opportunities, they would not enter the Korean fighting when Pyongyang was in our hands and the North Korean armies had utterly disintegrated. For once, in a way, former Secretary of State Dean G. Acheson agreed with Gen. MacArthur. When the Indian Ambassador at Peking, Sardar Panikkar, sent anguished warnings against a drive to the Yalu River, Acheson ridiculed the warnings and their author.

So far as is known, only three leading nerican officials argued for the course that now, by hindsight, looks so brilliant-ly wise—consolidation of our forces on the narrow North Korean "waist," where we would now give our eye-teeth to be. One was former Secretary of the Air Force, Thomas Finletter, who merely pointed out that we had won what we had set out to win, and had better be satisfied.

The other two were the chief American experts on the Soviet Union, Charles E. Bohlen and George F. Kennan.

Bohlen's and Kennan's warning was ignored, with tragic consequences. Had the warning been heeded, the very same Senators who are now attacking Kennan and Bohlen as had judges of Soviet behavior, would have frothed with indignation because "MacArthur's victory had been thrown away." Nothing less than the conquest of all of Korea was to be tolerated for an instant, according to the isolationist-extremists in that period. It is amusing to reflect on past history in this manner, since several of the same isolationist-extremists have more recently urged a straight policy of scuttle-and-run in Korea. But the incident is merely entertaining; it is also mean-

Worse Than Hitler

I would like to quote from Hansard the words of John Blackmore, Social Credit M.P. from Lethbridge.

"Social Credit would adopt measures adequate for the establishment and maintenance of a just price to producers, comprising the cost of production plus a fair profit. ..."

Does anyone not fully understand what these "adequate measures" would mean? They mean exactly this: a Social ard's lightsome, spoofing comedies, breezed happily along at the York Theatre Monday night, in the hands of an allht, in the hands of an all-nd capable, and at times, liant cast. Some good comedy lines missed fire through lack of brilliant cast. As a matter of fact, the production came close to being in the nature of a conjuring trick itself. Production took six days to prepare and at the last minute two important members of the cast had to be replaced.

Due to the indisposition of can one say, considering Cow-Arthur Coe Gray, a new mem and wrote this play with Ruther of the company who was to play the lead, "Charles," director Ian Thorne stepped into the part a few hours before curtain time.

But unless this fact had been announced from the stage, there was little evidence of it. Tempo did not suffer to any noticeable extent, there was no prompting, characterization was clear-cut, detail good.

The other replacement was that of Mary Measures. last week's "Eliza," who stepped into the part of "Edith," in the absence of Mary Hincks, and gave a splended comedy performance as the rattled, mo ronic maid.

There seems little doubt the York Company will pack 'em in with this one. For thor oughly good entertainment it would be hard to beat The

Founder with Foresight

In the days when British Columbia cities were being hewn out of giant forest stands, few men foresaw the tremendous future in store for Canada's Pacific Province.

One man who did was William Braid. In 1904, he founded the Province's first distillery-The British Columbia Distillery Company Limited in New Westminster.

At a time when that city's population was a mere nine thousand, William Braid was laying the firm foundations . . . setting the policy of quality . . . for an industry that has played an increasingly important part in B.C.'s economic development.

Since 1904, the Company has steadily expanded its facilities to meet the growing demand for its quality products at home and in the markets of the world.

Today, the modern British Columbia Distillery on New Westminster's Braid Street stands as tangible evidence of the foresight of its founder-William Braid.

Kaiser-Fraser to Buy Willys-Overland

NEW YORK (AP) — Kaiser panies in the world, after General Motors, Inc., for an estimated $62,300,000. The deal RITIED TEST-AERIAL is expected to be completed in April, subject to approval by Willys-Overland common stockholders.

Kaiser-Frazer says it has commitments of $72,000,000 in private capital to finance what it called one of the largest deals of its kind in the history of the auto industry.

It will boost Kaiser-Fraser assets to more than $200,000, 000, which K-F said would make it one of the largest auto com-

Community Responsibility To Insure Aged Protection By ELIZABETH B. HURLOCK, PhD

original article about homes for the aged several months ago, I have received a flood of letters both for and against the ideas it contained. Here is one I feel should be called to the attention of my readers in the hope that it will stir them into action so that they will investigate the conditions that exist in the homes for the aged in their own communities. It is written by a woman whose mother was put in a home because she needed the care the family could not give her. She (Q)-"Very recently, we were forced to put my mother in a city hospital because of her sinile condition. The day after her com-mitment, my sister and I visited her. We found her shivering in a bed from a very cold wind coming through an open window. Her covering consisted of a sheet, one blanket, and a spread, My sister reported this and and a spread. My sister reported this and was indignantly told by an attendant that there was nothing to be done because the window was broken and could not be closed.

Several days later, my mother told me she was cold and, on lifting the covers, I found Hurlock nothing but a short gown to her waist and a thin cotton spread. The bed was still by an open window. I talked to the attendant and she said my mother hadn't said a word since she came in. I know my mother felt so frightened and helpless that I doubt if she did say anything to anyone but her own family.

"On the ninth day after her confinement, she had a fever, two days later, her cough indicated that she had much mucous in her chest, and three hours after I left, she died. My first reaction was a feeling of relief that she no longer had to be dependent on people who have so little consideration and feeling for old people. God pity the helpless when even a drink of water is too much to give."
